Non-Functional Requirements

- The system should ensure that page load times and responses to user actions (e.g., assigning guides, viewing tour details) do not exceed 2 seconds under typical load conditions.
- All user data, including performance metrics, feedback, and personal information, must be securely stored and comply with university data protection policies. Access to sensitive information should be restricted based on user roles, and encryption should be implemented for data in transit and at rest.
- The system should maintain an audit log of critical actions performed by users (e.g., creation, modification, or deletion of tour details) to track changes and maintain accountability. Logs should be easily accessible to coordinators for review and compliance purposes.
- The system should automatically update each guide's performance metrics on the dashboard after each completed event. Metrics may include the total number of tours conducted, points earned, and feedback received.
- The dashboard statistics should refresh automatically every 5 minutes to show the latest data without requiring a manual refresh.
- The codebase should be modular, allowing individual components (such as tour management, guide assignment, etc.) to be updated or extended without affecting other components.

This page shows which guides applied to which tours, the advisor can choose one or more guides that applied to tour and save these. This page also shows all events that are past their time. The advisor can see all information based on an event and which guides guided that event. If the event happened, the advisor confirms and those work hours are written to the guides that worked on the given tours.
